Nasreddin and the Dinner Party

One afternoon, Nasreddin is working on his farm. A man comes to him with a letter. It is from a rich man in the village. The rich man is having a dinner party. He wants Nasreddin to come. Nasreddin is very happy. He wants to go.

That evening, Nasreddin goes to the party. He is wearing his work clothes. They are old and dirty. The people at the party don't talk to him. They don't give him any food. Nasreddin feels angry. So, he goes home.

Nasreddin puts the rice on his shoes. "Eat, shoes," he says. Then, he puts the fish on his shirt. "Eat, shirt." He puts the chicken in the pocket of his pants. "Eat, pants."

"What are you doing?" the rich man asks. "Are you crazy?"

"I am giving the food to my clothes," says Nasreddin. "You want to have my clothes at your party, but not me."
